First-ever Vancouver Brain Bee a success

Eighteen Vancouver high school students pitted their wits against each other during the first annual Vancouver Brain Bee on March 28.

The neuroscience competition, styled after a traditional 'spelling bee', was organized by Let's Talk Science Partnership Program volunteers at the University of British Columbia in partnership with the Brain Research Centre.

"All volunteers did an incredible job and displayed outstanding commitment to inspiring discovery in neuroscience," said Sherri Tran, LTS Partnership Program coordinator from the University of British Columbia.

The winner of this event, Paul Kendrick Lao, will represent Vancouver at the National Brain Bee in Hamilton this May.
